

Test Knitting Agreement V1 April 2021

Thank You for agreeing to work with KNITSONIK, I'm really excited to work with you! This document sets out terms and expectations for our work together so everything is clear to us both. In this Agreement, I means Knitwear Designer and you means Test Knitter.

Materials

For test knitting, you supply your own materials and knit the pattern using yarn of your choice. You keep the finished object. I supply a pattern + charts which have been tech-edited but not published.

Timescale

I appreciate your help with test knitting my pattern in time for its publication. By joining the test knit for a design you agree to finish the project by my deadline of: DD/MM/YYYY.

Instructions & Communication

I supply tech-edited instructions, and agree to manage test knitting via the Slack platform. You post photos of your progress there and flag any problems or confusion re: the directions. I do my best to clear up any issues, to always be polite and helpful, and to respond to queries quickly. I make any reasonable adjustments to pattern instructions and charts to ensure they meet your access needs: larger charts, bigger typeface and black and white charts, for example. To respect our time and resources, we do not use social media, DMs, Ravelry or Email to discuss the test knitting process. We keep all our communication in one place: on Slack.

Crediting

Wherever the pattern is published or promoted, you are credited as one of the test knitters using your preferred name or nickname, and links to your social media or websites if desired. I ensure your name and online links appear just as you would like.

Trust

I invite you into my creative process and entrust you with unpublished information. My trust requires your discretion. You do not share any aspect of our work together or post photos of your work online until after the pattern has been published.

Payment

In exchange for test knitting my pattern you will receive a free copy of the completed pattern or publication; credit for your work; and either a voucher for use in my online shop or a copy of any of the patterns for sale in my Ravelry store or online shop.
